ذ

ذ z, called zālī mangūta or zālī mu'jama, Dotted zāl, the eleventh letter of the Arabic-Persian alphabet, denoting in arithmetic 700, and in almanacks the last month of the Arabian year, zū 'l-hijjat, as ذ is the character used for zū 'l-qa'dat, the penultimate month. Scarcely more than one or two words in the Persian language begin with this letter, though it is occasionally found in the middle of a Persian word, where it interchanges with d and z. According to some authorities, it should be written for d after a quiescent weak letter (shāz, namūzan, shanīz for shād, namūdan, shanīd), and may be written for d after any moved letter, not weak (baz or bad, &c.).
